

CEDO Wet-Feet Ocean Camp

June 14-18, 2007

Dear Interested Families,

Summer 2007 has an adventure in store for you.....an adventure in marine biology! CEDO, the Intercultural Center for the Study of Deserts and Oceans, will be holding an overnight summer camp for youth ages 10-13. For five days and four nights children will explore the Upper Gulf of California intertidal zone and surrounding Sonoran Desert. Accommodations will be at the CEDO field station in Puerto Peñasco, Sonora, Mexico.

Campers will explore the marine biology of the Upper Gulf of California through both field study and hands-on activities. Uncovering brittle stars, nudibranchs, and fireworms in the intertidal zone, dancing for shrimp in the estuary, and discovering the secrets of different marine organisms that live in this biologically rich area are only a few of the activities in which the campers will participate.

Meeting a sea urchin!

Campers should bring:

- 3 - 4 changes of clothes
- 1 white t-shirt (for t-shirt printing)
- Water shoes or sandals
- Sunscreen & hat
- Water bottle
- Bathing suit & snorkeling gear
- Sleeping bag
- Personal items, toiletries
- Spending money
- Binoculars (if you have them)

Shrimp dance in Estero Morua.

Counselors with experience in marine biology and desert ecology will staff the camp. All food and beverages (including purified water) will be provided for campers on site. Campers will have the opportunity to visit downtown Peñasco and should bring some spending money but will spend the majority of their time in the field or at CEDO.
